

Dr. Hartman is a board certified plastic surgeon with specialty training in acute care of the injured burn patient and burn reconstruction

Upon completion of his general surgery residency at the Penn State University Milton S. Hershey Medical Center in 2009, Dr. Hartman then pursued a Burn Surgery Fellowship with the Indiana University School of Medicine in 2010. In order to provide complete care to the most challenging patients, he went on to complete a Surgical Critical Care Fellowship at Loyola University in Chicago in 2011. Dr. Hartman then returned to Indiana University to complete his plastic surgery training.

Dr. Hartman now serves as the medical director of the adult burn unit at Eskenazi Health/Indiana University as well as the pediatric burn unit at Riley Hospital for Children/Indiana University.
